July–December 2011

About the Centre for Community Child Health

The Centre for Community Child Health (CCCH) aims to support and empower communities to continually improve the health and wellbeing of children and their families. The Centre is part of The Royal Children's Hospital, Melbourne, and is a research centre of the Murdoch Children's Research Institute.

The Centre's professional development courses are designed to meet the needs of early childhood professionals, and their content draws on its cutting edge research and clinical work.

PEDS – Parents' Evaluation of Developmental Status

Date: August 25 (half day)

Cost: $125 inclusive of GST

Venue: CCCH, Parkville

PEDS is an accurate, reliable tool for early detection of developmental and behavioural problems in children from birth through to eight years of age. It is also a valuable parent engagement tool. This training is designed to teach a broad range of professionals to use this tool in order to begin a dialogue with parents about any concerns they may have about their child's development or behaviour.

September 2011

Platforms Service Redevelopment Framework: Module 6

What is service integration and how do we work towards it?

Dates: September 13 - 14 (2 days)

Cost: $510 inclusive of GST
(inclusive of the Platforms resource)

Cost: $370 inclusive of GST
(course only for those who already have the Platforms resource)

Venue: CCCH, Parkville

What is service integration? Why is it needed? What can we expect from integration? And how do we integrate services? This two-day interactive course aims to answer these questions and introduce participants to a stepped approach to developing an integrated service for the early years in their community.

Facilitators will guide participants through the process of engaging stakeholders, developing a vision and related outcomes, and determining the form of integration and governance arrangements using a partnership approach. Time will also be spent reflecting on this process and practical considerations for services.
